THE GREAT STRIKE.

The present phase of the great strike on the routhwestern railroads is this, viz: The roads agree to take back into their service all the men they require, regardless of their action during the strike, but the strikers insist that they shall all he taken back. Compliance with this demand would cause dismissal from employment of all the men who have remained in the service of the companies during the strike, and all b whom the communies have given employment in place of the strikers; and of course the de-mand is inadmissible. The companies will take back about one-third of the men,—this heing all they have present use for. From this it may be supposed that the places of about two-thirds of the strikers have already been dided by men not belonging to the latter organizations.

It is clearly impossible for the roads to dismiss the men whom they have employed to take the places racated by the strikers. This would be an act of gross injustice to the new employer and entered to the interests of the companies themselves. It becomes a necessity to stand by these men, alike as a measure of justice to them and of protection to the roads; for, should they be dismissed, the roads would be unabla to obtain men to stand by them in the future emer-gencies which such action would immediately Men have a right to be members of labor unions or not, as they please; but members of labor unions have no right to say that persons not members shall have no suplyment. In many branches of skilled labor, indeed, all, or nearly all, competent persons become members so that this discrimination does not arise. But in labor requiring little or no skill, or specia traiping, it is quite different. Gross injustice is done in such cases, when an organized body of men,—organized neither on skill or special fitness, and far less numerous than those who do not enter into memberahip with them-declare that the latter shall be excluded from one ployment. If they want to quit themselves it is their right; but it is not for them to say that others shall not have employment because they

for my reason that seems good to themselves,— and they are the sols judges of it,—they have no right whatever to linger about the premises to keep others from going to work. Having quit work, they have no further business there. The strikers at St. Louis, Kansas City and other places have, however, been assembling in and about the railway yards, ever since the strike begand have attacked the men at work, have disabled engines and otherwise obstructed the business which they had themselves abandoned. Of course this will come to a crisis before long. If It goes on military force will be used to clear them out, and men may be killed. The dividing line between the rights of the two parties in cases of this kind is well de fined; and strikars, where they resort to mis chievous or violent interferance with the basiness or property of their late employers, are on variance with each other. Practical judgmen intalize with each shier. Fridain judgment, the done apparishes and facts, destroys all such ideals? fast enough.

We have been reading lately about "the ideal newspaper." This newspaper is to be full with-out redundancy, and cheap without being meagre, stipshol or poor. It is to contain only the essential news of the day, written in intelli-gible and compact form; and from it all matters relating to trade, commerce, police reports, routine affairs or every-day transactions, are to excluded. These are to be left to special papers. The editorial comment is to be restricted to brief elucidation of the events of the day. The paper is to eschew everything of sensational" character, and particularly crimipai news, and must contain no advertisements.

rates. As the ideal newspaper is to have no advertisements, it will therefore be no newspaper at all. The journal that takes advertis upon the practica purpose of doing practical sings in a practical way, using all legitimate means and instruments necessary to the end And have the heatidealist who can press most of these recens and instruments, into service for his particular perpose, and can bring new agents and energies, and harness multiplied rees, to the end he has in view. Journalism is not to be made to some by clipping its wings.

A WORD ABOUT ("ENJOYMENT,"

Chinese are gone, out still, as we are told, labor le not ethancinated. Deliverance has indeed come to those who were working in the coal mines; since, as a consequence of the agitation, the coal mining industry has cultrely suspended, and the miner, no longer find work to do. But the lumber industry is not yet quite annihilated, although it has been carried on during more than a year past without any profit whatever. Eastern lumbermen are now coming into the country, who think this industry ought to be not on the Peatern begins and thus now the second put on the Eastern basis; and they are proposing to reduce the wages of men in the logging camps to a scale running from $20 to $60 per month. This includes board. It is said that wages hitherto have ranged from $35 to $75.

against reduction. But what is surprising is the reason given for the protest. In a letter to the Seattle organ it is stated thus: "The men are generally confined in the woods away from all enjoyment, when most of their bosses are enjoying all the comforts of life—some in the caloon over the policy game; others squandering their money on fast women and fast horses." So the ullimatum of agitation at Puget Sound seems to be a demand for means for "enjoyment of the comforts of life;" and chief of these comforts are the poker game and fast women and fast horses. It seems to be thought that if a man se luxur es, or can't get wages enough too many men who are grambling about their alleged bard lot, and whose discontent since the bard times set in has taken the direction of a furious crusade upon the Chinese. These are the men who will work only at intervals, till they get a little money; when away they go to spend it in "enjoyment." They make loud pra-test against every effer of the moderate wages which an industry or business can afford to pay, and think they cught to have much higher wages, so that they will not be obliged to work so long to boy the "enjoyment"—that is to say the indulgence in vice to which they think themselves entitled. The poker game, the liquor shops and still vilor places get their moner; they have nothing laid by for the effects of hard times, and are ready material therefore for every rescally agitator and victors demander. gogue who tells them that they are injuged and this world mustn't expect to accomplish it with but working all the time. Enjoyment, and especially the kind of "enjoyment" that thus to vice or even to iddeness, which also is vice, they must not think of. To talk about enjoyment, other than that derived from close attention to work business. July, is quite unworthy of earnest men had in particular they who set before their ninds the indulgence of suce, including the ilco of ideness, and look to it for "enjoyment," will always be "out" with the world. That ten who work only for short periods and then go on a heat for "enjoyment" so long as their money asts will ever be misorable. Better far for the logger, and every other man, to work all the ime for $20 a month than one-half the time for [300], and then spend they that half in pursuit of Penjoyment." For waste of time in theness, and waste of money and of moral fibre taylicious indulgence, will always be averged. If om that Erimps there is no escape. Her "inobletieg ministers" are present always "in their sightless substances" to "wait on nature's misch ef.".

GRANGERS RESOLUTIONS.

McMinnville Grange, Patrons of Huebauc y, comes forward with a preamile and series of resolutions indicating that the order of which is an integral part, though ong silent upon political matters in this state, proposes to again so heard in behalf of those whom it represents. the heard in behalf of those whom it regressed is. There is nothing new in the premittle; which sets forth the causes which lead to the action resolved upon. The old, familiar charge aga us torporations and monopolies, clieging constant appreciaion of the producing and aboring asses, is reiterated. The press is arra gued as being controlled by these, and legislato. as being their ready tools.

To check this power, the classes cited averaged to combine, eacrifice party prejudice, make common cause against the enemy and ent them with independent bullats. Neither is there anything riew in this plan. It has been formulated so frequently in times past that the records of few granges would fail, upon being searched, to furnish it. In the past, advice of this kind has been faithfully followed, until such time as the political canvass began to grow warm, when it has invariably been dis-missed for future consideration. The method. proposed is perfectly legitimale. There is no eason in the world why agriculturists should not combine to defeat men who are the known, and sworn agents of corporate power. If they feel that such power is a menu-to their iden-ests, the simple instinct of self-preservation is sufficient expuse for such a course, if, indeed, it is deemed that the exercise of so plain a pixtue for entry entering exercise. The only question in connection with the proposition is: Will indicate the entering entering entering the entering ent ridual voters combine to carry it out?" Julig tog the future by the past, the puly stau fard is such matters, the answer would be an unbesithing and decided negative. It is easier, to bake complaint of wrongs, real or imaginary, than to seek cool, calculating redress. Just resentment often expends its force in voicing these complaints, and as a consequence resclu-tions proposing beroic remedies are usually than-

The conditions of the act that required registration of voters was but a single feature of a general act for regulation of elections. As periodore suggested by The Chroonias, it by no means follows that because the portion of the act relating to registration has been held unconstitutional the remainder of the act-the body of it—is invalid. Examination of it will show that though registration is ella inaise, there get remains a complete act for regulation of elections, which may supersed the old law It may be taken as a principle of construction that the finding of a single clause or part of an act invalid will not invalidate the whole unless the part or feature found invalid is interwover with or permeates the whole act. In this case there is no such condition or consequence. Registration omitted, there is a very complete election law in this act, and we believe the safer way and the proper way would be to hold the conting election under it. Judges of election have already been appoint-ed under this act, and notified cf their appoint-hent. Return to the old law would make it decessory to appoint judges anew. This would seem to be unnecessary, and probably would be jillegal. At all events there is no apparent need of bolding the entire law lately enacted myalid, and it would probably be a hazardous thing to do so. On the other hand there would seem to be no risk whatever in adhering to the general provisions of the law lately emoted, since elim-ination of the requirement of registration in no wise affects its general features.

The orchardists of this state would do well to lurn their attention to late varieties of apples However abundant the apple crop is, there is always a dearth of good apples in the market at this season of the year. We are told that Oregon applies "do not keep" like apples grown in the East and middle West. As far as this is the fault of those who produce them it should be remedled by care in picking and handling. The truth of the matter perhaps is that the great a proportion of most orchards is given up to full and early whiter fruit. Thousands of rushels of the most popular varieties of these perish every year because there is no demand for them, while later on there are no apples in the market This is the result of funttent on or mismanagrainnt on the part of furniers whose orchands do not pay, simply because they produce that lettle fruit of late varieties.

Columbia river fishermen, have fixed the urba of fish for comperies at 60 cents each. Owners have not signified their assentio the price, but in case no further distantance of the labor market is threatened they will probably concelle it. Bad the "professional" working me t, who spent the winter in the attempt to hatch broils, been euccessful hundreds of men who are spreading their seless upon the annual fishing grounds would be without prospect of work for the season, instead of, as now, quietly submit-ting their terms to capitalists, with every pres-pect that they will be allowed.

Ideal things are soldom attainable, One reaon of it is the simple one that they are usually absurd. They are antagonistic and contradictory; there is no agreement upon them. One man's "ideal" is at vagiance with another's. What most people regard as "ideals," therefore, are seldom anything more than loose opinions or visionary notions, which of course must be at

This "ideal" newspaper is about as wise a thing as Gulliver's ideal academy. And about as practicable. I's a paper restricts itself to these limits who will want to read it? Again, readers granted, how will it get money where-with to obtain a summary of the world's news, even that news which it is to be permitted to pub-lish? The resource of every great newspaper is advertisements. The money derived from sales and subscriptions barely pays the cost of white paper and of distribution. It is the money depaper and of distribution. This the money de-rived from advertisements that enables a jour-nal to gather news from all quarters and print it, and at the same time to sell its issues at low and complete news, and everybody will want it, while the ideal paper will take its station in the ranks of begus journalism, to pass from there to the limbo of forgotten things.

The best ideals in this world are those formed
